“At Amgen, maintaining sterile, controlled, and high-performance biopharmaceutical manufacturing environments is central to our operations. Our production suites rely on continuous air handling, stainless bioreactors, and precision processing systems, all of which contribute to elevated background noise within hard-surfaced cleanrooms. Clear communication between technicians is critical, and we required a solution that would improve acoustic conditions without compromising GMP or ISO compliance.

All Noise Control provided Cleanroom Wall Panels specifically engineered for hygienic environments. The panels integrated seamlessly into our facility and maintained the smooth, cleanable surfaces required in biologics manufacturing. Since installation, we have experienced noticeable improvement in sound control and speech clarity within active production areas. The modular design, professional finish, and durable construction align with our long-term operational and compliance standards.”
